The Bronfman Fellowship provides a beacon for optimism for the Jewish community and beyond.

Since 1987, the Fellowship has provided transformative experiences for intellectually curious young Jews of diverse backgrounds from Israel and North America to build a more dynamic and pluralistic future.

Bronfman cultivates a space for real conversations, for viewpoint diversity, and productive disagreement - something that is increasingly rare on our college campuses and within society at large. We believe that this is the heart of the Bronfman experience - and that it should be nurtured.

Pluralism, respectful discourse, and introspection are the bedrocks of our model.

The Bronfman Fellowship has profound lessons to share with the wider Jewish community: a ripple effect that great educators can have in the Jewish communal space by inspiring Jewish ideas and Jewish choices, and ultimately by inspiring talented young people to become community builders, cultural creators, deep thinkers, and moral voices.
